Subject: RE: EJ Comments for Dewey Burdock Permits - some thoughts about how to proceed

Hi Corbin,
No problem! I should have left that column in, but didn't realize that at the time.

I have been thinking about how to proceed with these comments while I was going through them again. If I were doing this, I would go through and highlight the EJ portions of the comments and reorganize those sentences and phrases under topic headings, like Impacts to Native Americans, Geographic Scope of EJ Analysis, Sacredness of Black Hills, Changes to EJ document, etc. Then subdivide the main categories further into subtopics, if needed.

Lucita and I have been going through this iterative process with other comment topics to make it easier to summarize the comments in the RTC and figure out if any comments should result in edits to the document. I have found that sorting through them iteratively like this helps to understand better what the comments are saying and kick starts thinking about possible responses. It may seem like baby steps, but it has really helped me get my head around the comment topics and see a path forward.

Just a suggestion & I hope it is helpful!

Attached is the 55 page document with the column added identifying the topics covered in the comment based on Lucita's review. I removed couple of duplicate comments so the document is now one page shorter.

Subject: EJ Comments for Dewey Burdock Permits

When: Friday, March 20, 2020 1:30 PM-2:00 PM (UTC-07:00) Mountain Time (US & Canada).

Where: Skype Meeting

Hi Everyone: after having reviewed the nature and scope of EJ comments, the EJ program would like some additional guidance on how best to address these comments from ORC and the UIC program.

Please join us if you can recognizing this is short notice and schedules are tight next week.

Thanks,

Douglas
